First Reading: I Samuel 1:20-22, 24-28

Hannah sees Samuel as the Lord's gift to her. In return, she brings him to Eli and offers his life to the Lord.

Second Reading: I John 3:1-2, 21-24

Christians experience God's goodness in being His children already now, along with a promise of being even more in the future.

Gospel: Luke 2:4-52

This section of Luke is much like an "overture" to the balance of the Gospel. The focus is meant to be on Jesus' pronouncement about His relationship to His Father. Nonetheless we sympathize with His earthly parents who experience the temporary loss of their son.

Reflection by Rev. Leonard N. Peterson

If it has not happened to us, we know it has happened to others. The TV news captures it with pictures and sound in all its pain and sadness. A little boy or girl wanders away from its parents, sometimes right out of the house, only to meet an ill-timed death. We get to see the tear-stained faces on camera and perhaps also hear the choking voices caught by a reporter's microphone. Soon a makeshift memorial of teddy bears and candles emerges at some significant spot. A true family tragedy.

Fortunately for the rest of us, we can watch from a safe distance, because for now at least, it's not our turn. A similar family happenstance is described in today's Gospel, although this one happened long before TV or even electricity, and it turned out not to be tragic. It lets us know that even for the holiest of people bad things happen. A young son lost in amid a crowded caravan through three whole days of searching. And when reunion finally occurs, a mild rebuke given to the parents who unfortunately forgot the boy's earthly mission, even though an angel had told them twelve years before.

One way or another we have all experienced family problems of one kind or another. They may not have escalated to the level of tragedy, but they have all been unwanted and hurtful. Hopefully, the happier times our family has enjoyed strike a balance, and we get through the other kind. It is important to recall from time to time that the good times are meant to sustain us. Though we have never taken any vows about it, we honor our families and stay loyal "in good times and in bad, in sickness and in health, 'til death do us part."

Today's Christmastime Feast of the Holy Family "widens the focus", if you will, of the imaginary Church camera from that of the Child in the manger to the Child as a near adult, and the two adults who stood by the manger and now stand beside each other in fear and sadness. "Where can He be?" they ask themselves. "He's never done anything like this before." No wonder that when they finally reunite, His Mother asks her plaintive question "Why have you done this to us?"

Now we identify with the story in a way we didn't expect at first. How? By changing Mary's words only slightly and asking God when bad things happen to us "Why have you done this to me?" Yes, it's the old matter of the problem of evil that surfaces when bad things happen to good people. But angry fists or malicious thoughts hurled God's way are not the solutions to the situation. Instead we are to rely on the example of Mary and Joseph and how they handled things like this along with their unspoken appeal to us to trust. It's all part of being members of God's family. It's trusting God our heavenly Father to know what's best for us at all times.

There are a host of aphorisms that reflect on family. I was struck by this one as appropos for all the Christmas visiting that goes on: "Home is where you treat your friends like family, and your family like friends."

St Boniface Mission Statement

As members of our parish, we believe that we share in the mission of Jesus through our baptism and commitment to the values expressed in the gospel.

The dedication of our parish to the Holy Spirit calls us to be particularly attentive to the inspiration and guidance of the Spirit as we:

Gather as a community that worships together and supports one another in spiritual growth;

Witness to our belief through sharing our faith with others and providing for education in faith to our members;

Respond with compassion to both the spiritual and corporal needs of those around us;

Care for the many gifts we have been given and seek to use them wisely.
