The 31st. Sunday in Ordinary Time October 30, 2016

First Reading: Wisdom 11:22-12:2

This section is a digression from the topic of Israel vs. Egypt and focuses on God's power and mercy. That mercy is so great as to find God overlooking people's sins and inviting them to repentance.

Second Reading: II Thessalonians 1:11- 2:2

God's power in us enables us to fulfill our calling when we stay faithful to Him. Paul prays for his readers to be strong, especially when false understandings of the Parousia are presented.

Gospel: Luke 19:1-10

Only Luke of the four evangelists tells us this charming story. The "vertically challenged" Zaccheus is chosen by Jesus to be His host for the night. While some onlookers "grumble" from rash judgment, Zaccheus revels in joy and promises to reform his life for Jesus' sake.

Reflection by Rev. Leonard N. Peterson

I recall a life lesson from my Mom given to me long ago and not forgotten. When I told her of meeting a new boy at school who was adopted, it was a first for me, and I was not sure what it meant. After explaining things, she told me not to feel sorry for the boy. That was because all adopted boys and girls were special because their parents actually picked them out. They were chosen. The point was choice. Marvelous, mysterious choice.

In this well-known gospel story that only Luke tells, of the little man Zaccheus and the day Jesus called him down from his perch in the sycamore tree, we likely rejoice because we know that too often people who may be tall in height are little in the world's estimation, much like you and me. But consider the after effects of what Jesus did that day. They are worth our reflection.

1. First, we have Zaccheus himself, scampering down that sycamore tree only to stand before Jesus, the Son of God, and sprouting a never seen smile. How joyful he must have been! We can imagine the cruel teasing he took from the townspeople and the jabs to his dignity as a man just because of the way he made his living.

2. Then there's the crowd, "grumbling", as Luke tells us. Gossips and cowards hiding as they always do, in a crowd. If indeed "Zaccheus" meant "clean", then here he was mingling among the "unclean."

3. Finally, we look at Jesus, likely smiling at Zaccheus. Happy to hear that Zaccheus was making resolutions to change (like the ones we make at New Year). Of course, that smile of Jesus likely faded when He heard the crowd grumbling. That compelled Him to announce whom it was that He was sent to save.

Come to think of it, all of us have been chosen. Chosen by the same Jesus to make the same changes in our lives to "turn away from sin and be faithful to the gospel" as the priest charges us on Ash Wednesday.

We too have been adopted by God at our baptism into the family of the Church. That, by the way, was the finest gift from our parents after that of life itself. We have also been gifted with our Catholic faith. We have been and will be the recipients of the Bible's guidance at each Sunday Mass, where we hear four excerpts of it proclaimed to us: The Old Testament Reading and Psalm; the New Testament Letters, and the Gospels. We are privileged to feed on the Body and Blood of Christ in Holy Communion for strength in the battle with Christ's opponent the devil. Boy, have we been chosen!

All of that should make us feel special but not boastful. We are not to be like that Pharisee we heard about last week, who went to the Temple to brag. No. For us that tax collector in the back of the hall who humbly begged for God's mercy is our model. He knew, and we should know that it's God's choice to be merciful to us. And in the end, it is our choice, not chance, that truly determines our destiny.

Welcome Reception/Sprinkle Shower

You are cordially invited to attend a Welcome Reception/Sprinkle Shower for the two newest members of the Meehan family, Cailine and Meiline.
